Provider Nurse Call Systems Give Facilities Complete Patient-to-Staff Communications

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

August 25 - Chicago, Illinois - Jeron Electronic Systems, Inc. (www.jeron.com) announced today the release of a new Hospital/End-user Case Study highlighting applications of the Provider® 790 Nurse Call System. End-user facilities have worked with Jeron to describe their nurse call 'best practices' success stories for release into the healthcare marketplace. The flexibility of the Provider 790 Nurse Call System allows facilities to choose system options and integrations to best meet their unique applications to drive better patient experiences, streamline caregiver workflow processes, and to eliminate wasted steps. Three recent national Jeron Case Studies are from Wickenburg, Arizona, Southern Pines, North Carolina, and Cordele, Georgia.

Wickenburg Community Hospital in Wickenburg, Arizona contacted Jeron Electronic Systems, Inc. because their previous nurse call had no workflow features to streamline staff-to-patient interactions. After just weeks of use, Linda Brockwell, CNO at Wickenburg commented, "The Provider 790 Nurse Call Systems is easy to use and allows the most appropriate staff to respond quickly. The system supports our staff to work as a cohesive team."

St. Joseph of the Pines Health Center in Southern Pines, North Carolina informed Jeron that they wanted the benefits and reliability of a centralized nurse call system that also came with accountability reporting. The facility was grateful that the reports "give us summaries of events that aren't just related to overtime calls, we are glad the reports highlight good performance as well."

Crisp Regional Hospital out of Cordele, Georgia credited their successful nurse call installation and even the entire Emergency Department renovation to working with Jeron's local distributor to determine the best options to overcome their bottlenecks, overcrowding, and limited access to information. Their newly expanded ED combined with key Provider Nurse Call integrations resulted in patient satisfaction measurements in the 75th percentile.

Ericka Baran, Vice President of Marketing, states, "Our end-user partners are using advanced nurse call technology for the first time and are seeing marked improvements in staff-to-patient interactions and tightened workflow. The flexibility of the Provider 790 architecture lets each facility create a customized solution to match their needs. No matter how these healthcare facilities came to us, they all ended up the same way - with a high quality nurse call communication system that allows them to expand their services, benchmark staff performances, and become a more collaborative facility."
